

Fire Investigation in Commercial Kitchen Systems

Monday, May 2nd, 2011

8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m., includes lunch
Richmond City Hall
6911 No. 3 Road, Richmond, B.C.

Course Description

This seminar is designed to show firefighters, fire investigators, attorneys, insurance professionals and other interested persons the common origins and causes of kitchen system fires.

This full-day course uses video, a virtual picture tour and PowerPoint to take you into commercial kitchen systems and onto rooftops to reveal code deficiencies. You will see for yourself what challenges these systems face. A virtual tour of real case studies will show you the worst of what can happen.

Instructor

Phil Ackland has been in the commercial kitchen exhaust industry for over 40 years. He sits on the National Fire Protection Association's technical committee for NFPA96: Standard for Ventilation Control and Fire Protection of Commercial Cooking Equipment. He has written five books on commercial kitchen exhaust systems covering installation, inspection, cleaning and fire investigation.

All registrants receive a copy of Phil Ackland's Fire Investigation in Commercial Kitchen Systems which leads you step-by-step through an investigation of a commercial fire. It is written for fire investigators, analysts, engineers, expert witnesses and attorneys to provide detailed information regarding commercial kitchen exhaust and fire suppression systems.
